Albania Resents Minesweeping

BRITISH SHIPS CLEARING OUT CORFU STRAITS

Albania Warns Action Will Be Regarded As Violation
Of Her Sovereignty

LONDON, Nov. 13—British minesweepers were plying the Straits of Corfu along the Albanian coast today despite a warning by Albania that such action would be regarded as a deliberate violation of the country's sovereignty.

The admiralty disclosed that the minesweeping operation off Albania was in progress. A foreign office source said the government had no intention of reconsidering its decision.

The task of the sweepers was to clear the narrow channel between the island of Corfu and Greek-Albanian coast, where two British warships hit mines last month with heavy casualties and damage.

The sweepers were working well within range of five-inch coastal batteries which fired upon two British ships last May. Their standard equipment included two guns manned by expert naval marksmen. They were under orders to defend themselves if fired upon.

The admiralty said the sweepers might be escorted by heavier warships. The decision on that matter was up to the Mediterranean command, it said.

The sweepers were operating from the British base at Ardostol in southern Greece.

The operation started yesterday after the British government notified Albania.

SIX POLICEMEN KILLED BY MINE

Second Holy Land Explosion
Derails Train; Several Arrests Reported

JERUSALEM, Nov. 13—Six police constables were killed today when a Jewish underground mine was touched off under a police trolley three miles south of Jerusalem.

In a second explosion near Tel Aviv a train from Lydda was derailed with an uncertain number of casualties.

Two of the constables killed were British and four were Arabs. The trolley was blown up by a mine which, apparently had been buried between the tracks and was detonated electrically. The force of the explosion lifted the trolley to the height of telegraph lines along the railroad and tossed the bodies of three of the victims 200 yards from the wreckage.

It was believed that the underground had planned to blow up a potash train from the Dead sea which was consigned to the war department. The potash train was delayed at the last moment and the police trolley sent ahead of it. The attack occurred near the Jewish village of Betir. Several arrests were made.

'BRIEF BUST' IS PREDICTED BY BUSINESS GROUP

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13—The new council of American Business, Inc., today forecast a "brief but violent bust" next year but it said the economy would zoom back to prosperity levels quickly thereafter.

The council said the recession would be sharp enough to drive thousands of independent firms out of business. It based the prediction on such danger signs as growing inventories, increasing consumer resistance to high prices, and diminishing construction.

After the recession, however, business will make a comeback and quickly reach prosperity levels, it said.

The council's prediction was made in a survey based on what it called "a consensus of the best informed economic opinion in Washington."

BIGGEST FARM HARVEST OVER

Food Production Highest Ever Recorded By United States

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13—America's biggest farm harvest in history virtually was in the bins today.

The agriculture department said ideal harvest weather in October improved both the quantity and quality of most crops and boosted the production index three points above the former 1942 high.

Cotton and cottonseed were the only notable exceptions.

The department said that a prospective crop of 3,380,672,000 bushels of corn—the largest on the books—means an all-time high yield of more than 35,000,000 tons of food and fiber.

Coupled with history's largest deerskin crop and record or near-record crops of many other farm products, this assures Americans their most plentiful food supplies on record.

It also may spur the end of the government's remaining restrictions on grain. These curtail distillers' grain and limit the production of flour for domestic use to 85 per cent of last year.

The prospective corn yield tops the former record of 3,203,000,000 bushels in 1942 by about 177,000,000 bushels.

In addition to corn, prospects also improved in October for soybeans, potatoes, tobacco, apples, pears, grapes and sugar beets. Cotton was the only major crop to slump.

BYRD TO HAVE PLENTY OF AID ON EXPEDITION

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13—Rear Adm. Richard E. Byrd, who had daring but little more on his three previous trips to the Antarctic, will have all the aid the Navy and science can muster when he undertakes his fourth mission early next month.

Byrd will head an expeditionary force of 4,000 officers and men and 13 ships, including an aircraft carrier. Three hundred government scientists will carry on research work with the best equipment available.

The new expedition is the largest ever sent by the Navy to the frigid south polar continent—an area equal to the combined size of the United States and Europe. Chief objectives are experimentation with cold weather operations, scientific and geological research and further exploration of the antarctic's uncharted wastes.

Byrd, who had only limited funds and ancient equipment when he blazed the way to what is now Little America in 1928, revealed details of his forthcoming trek at a news conference yesterday. He said the expedition will search for uranium, ingredient of atomic bombs, but emphasized it will not carry on a "uranium race" with other nations.

Deadline for filing of expense accounts of candidates and issues in the Nov. 5 election is 6:30 p. m. Friday it was stated Wednesday by the Pickaway County Board of Elections.

NAVY PLANNING 2 TASK FLEETS

Atlantic, Pacific Fleets
Scheduled Under New Setup Due Jan. 1

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13—The Navy will begin a simplified system of fleet deployment Jan. 1, with one major "task fleet" in the Atlantic and one in the Pacific. Designation of fleets by number will be abolished under the new setup, which the Navy said would result in "reducing command overhead and simplifying fleet organization in the light of war experience."

The number of ships in active operation will remain the same.

The first task fleet, in the Pacific, will be commanded by Vice Adm. A. E. Montgomery, formerly of the fifth fleet. The second task fleet will be stationed in the Atlantic and is to be headed by Vice Adm. W. H. P. Blandy, who commanded the Bikini atomic bomb tests.

Montgomery and Blandy will have administrative command over all the naval units in their areas. The ship at their disposal will be distributed among subsidiary commands in each ocean.

The organizational shakeup will put two admirals out of a job the fourth fleet, and Vice Adm. Daniel E. Barbey, commander of the fourth fleet and Vice Adm. Howard F. Kingman, commander of the Third fleet.

ATOMIC ENERGY COMMISSION OF UN IN SESSION

LAKE SUCCESS, N. Y., Nov. 13—The United Nations atomic energy commission holds its first meeting in four months today in the wake of Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov's prediction that the Allies will remove their differences over the way to outlaw atomic weapons.

A second preface to the session was delivered last night when Sen. Tom Connally, D. Tex., reaffirmed the United States' insistence on international controls and inspections as the only means of controlling atomic energy.

Connally, when asked to comment on Molotov's expressions of confidence about atomic control and world disarmament, said the U. S. was eager for disarmament but would not scrap its own arms "while other great powers remain armed."

The commission has not held a full-dress meeting since July 14, although its committees — and most of its personnel — have been busy since then in a series of technical and political discussions.

By United Press
Two more homes of non-strikers were bombed in the Hollywood movie strike today, while at Washington the government sought to avert a threatened coal mine strike Friday by getting out of the mining business.

Meanwhile, the 44-day shipping tie-up on the west coast neared settlement. Federal conciliators hoped it would end by nightfall. In another major labor dispute, two separate demands were made for government seizure of the strike-bound Transcontinental & Western Air Line.

At Hollywood, police said the bombing of two more homes was connected with the strike called by the AFL Conference of Studio Unions. One explosion shattered the windows and splintered the front porch at the home of Paul Byrd, Columbia studios superintendent. Three homes were bombed yesterday. A $5,000 reward was offered for the arrest of those responsible for the bombing of a film technician's home, imperiling the lives of his two sleeping children.

In the west coast shipping strike, federal conciliator Nathan P. Feinsinger announced settlement of the dispute between the CIO marine engineers and the Pacific American shipowners association. The settlement was effected on the basis of a compromise (Continued on Page Two)

President May Invite GOP Advice

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13—President Truman will follow up his proposal to cooperate with the Republican congress by inviting GOP leaders to participate in his weekly legislative conferences, it was reported today.

A high administration official said Mr. Truman had that in mind Monday when he told a news conference he wanted to cooperate with the Republican-controlled congress in shaping the nation's course during the two remaining years of his term.

Since his elevation to the White House, it has been Mr. Truman's custom, while congress is in session, to hold Monday morning conferences almost weekly with his Democratic congressional leaders.

The group includes prominent pro-temperance Kenneth D. McKellar and Democratic leader Alben W. Barkley of the senate and speaker Sam Rayburn and Democratic leader John W. McCormack in the house. "Now the group will be broadened to include the Republican leaders," the administration official predicted. "The president will invite Republican leaders in congress to participate in the weekly meetings, as well as Democrats."

It was pointed out that Mr. Truman has often invited GOP congressional leaders to White House conferences in the past for special occasions.

SCHOOL PUPILS CASUALTIES AS BOILER EXPLODES

BARADA, Mich., Nov. 13—About 75 children and teachers were reported as casualties when a boiler exploded in Barada school today. There were no known dead.

Gerald Howard, owner of the Barada implement store, said he visited the scene of the blast shortly after it happened and said that he was "sure some of them must have been killed. There is no way of telling, though," he said. "They have taken some away in ambulances and are trying to get at others with torches."

The Barren county sheriff's office at St. Joseph said it had no details on the blast but that "it looks like a pretty bad situation."

Soap Leads Long List Of Items Costing More

By United Press
The price of soap increased as much as 50 per cent today to lead a long list of rising prices on articles ranging from scrap steel to bonded whisky.

The Dun & Bradstreet wholesale food index rose Monday to $6.29, the second highest level it has reached since President Truman's decontrol order. It was $6.14 during the preceding week and $4.15 a year ago.

The highest index, representing the total price per pound of 31 foods in general use, was $6.34 recorded on Oct. 29.

Nearly 50,000 Cleveland Negroes agreed to boycott meat markets in Negro district markets for two weeks, charging they were paying one to 11 cents a pound more for poor grades of meat than markets in other retail stores were charging for better grades.

Retail food prices were reported moving upward a cent or two at a time in several large cities. Detroit and Washington, D. C., both reported that parking lot rates had jumped.

Many cities, however, including Minneapolis, Des Moines, Ia., Indianapolis and Salt Lake City reported no major increases and said manufacturers were hoping to keep prices as low as possible.

International Harvester company announced a nine per cent increase in the price of tractors and farm implements, based on "present higher wages and material costs." The company said it would not attempt "to anticipate future increases in these items."

Many large manufacturers and wholesalers said they would try to hold the price line for the present, but could not predict what would happen in the future.

Spokesmen for the soap industry said that despite the higher prices there would be only slight improvement in the supply of soap, which has been scarce for many months.

Increases were announced by three of the nation's leading soap manufacturers. At Cincinnati, Procter and Gamble company and M. Werx company announced that their six-ounce bars would sell for nine cents, an increase of three cents. Both companies announced that 21-ounce boxes of soap chips (Continued on Page Two)

OHIO TO TAKE BACK USES WORK THIS SATURDAY

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 13—Transfer of the United States Employment service back to the state of Ohio, ratified after a hard fight in the last session of congress, will occur Nov. 16.

The transfer will affect some 1300 state employees, who will now become State employees.

Charles H. Jones, administrator of the Bureau of unemployment compensation, will be the chief of the Ohio state employment service when it is returned to the state. The function of the state service, the oldest established state employment service, originally was to provide jobs for the unemployed, but with the coming of the war many duties were added—workers had to be classified in the many unusual jobs brought on by the war, and the labor market changed to older men and women.

These changes helped to bring about the transfer of the state agency to federal control, with the understanding that as soon as the emergency was over the employment service was to return to state control.

Of the 1300 state employees who will be transferred Saturday, only 500 were with the state when the original transfer was made.

GOVERNMENT IN NEW MOVE TO AVOID STRIKE

Operators And Krug Meet As Government Prepares
Settlement Plan

HOPING FOR AGREEMENT

Federal Leaders Want To
Get Out Of Business
Held Since May

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13—Soft coal operators were brought back into the mine wage dispute today in a last-ditch administration attempt to get the government out of the coal business.

The operators were summoned into conference with Secretary of Interior J. A. Krug amid signs that the government was preparing a settlement formula to submit to them and John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers (AFL).

Krug, who negotiated the present government contract with Lewis, also scheduled a conference with Lewis at 2:30 p. m.

Although prospects did not appear bright, Krug hoped to promote an agreement between the operators and the union. Until that is done, the government cannot release the mines it seized last May.

Another stalemate between the industry and Lewis also would mean that the government itself would have to negotiate a new contract to prevent a strike of 400,000 soft coal miners. Under Lewis' interpretation of the present agreement, he can serve a notice Friday putting the miners on strike Nov. 20.

To avoid negotiating another agreement with the UMW, Krug was making a final effort to bring the owners and the union together so the government could release the mines. Because the miners will not work without a contract, the government will not let loose of the mines until a private agreement is negotiated.

Indications that the government was preparing concrete proposals recalled that a similar plan was followed two months ago in the now eight-month-old deadlock between the union and the operators. Government-sponsored conferences collapsed then in two days.

A workable settlement plan now must call for wage increases and shorter hours—which were not in dispute during the September conferences. Those negotiations broke down because southern operators balked at union demands for a welfare fund, a national safety code and union recognition for supervisors.

There was no optimism over the (Continued on Page Two)

DANIELS SEES LITTLE CHANCE OF 'HONEYMOON'

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13—"There ain't going to be any honeymoon."

That's how Josephus Daniels, Raleigh, N. C., publisher and secretary of Navy under President Woodrow Wilson, feels about the talk of harmony between President Truman and the new Republican congress.

Daniels, who called on the President yesterday, said there wouldn't and shouldn't be any political honeymoon between the two major parties. Each has its own policies, he said, and should stand solidly behind them.

He said he hoped Mr. Truman had a "very big pen" to "veto as hard as nails" any reactionary legislation passed by the Republican congress. He expressed belief the Republicans would try to pass the Case labor bill, repeal the Wagner act, enact high tariffs and pass other legislation based on "old Republican ideals."

Daniels predicted there would be a stalemate in the government for the next two years similar to the one in 1918-20 when President Woodrow Wilson had to deal with a Republican congress.

which both the United States and Britain have a veto—should be the body to decide when withdrawal is safe.

In the last analysis this policy would allow the United States and Britain to be the final judge on withdrawal of their troops from Trieste. Byrnes has long feared a Trieste settlement unfavorable to Yugoslavia might lead to a Yugoslav coup.

For months Byrnes has beaten down Soviet Foreign Minister Vyacheslav M. Molotov's efforts to force big four agreement on early withdrawal of all foreign troops from Trieste. And he succeeded last night in beating down Molotov's first offensive in this direction at the big four council of foreign ministers here.

Before the New York council is many more days old, there is bound to be some bright East versus West fireworks on this issue because Molotov is extremely vulnerable on the whole question of foreign troops in other countries.

British Foreign Minister Ernest Bevin already has shot one barb at him this week on the issue of Soviet occupation troops in eastern European countries to maintain communication lines with Soviet occupation forces in Austria. Bevin suggested alternative lines, since the British have arranged for their troops in Austria when they withdraw from Italy.

The price of soap increased as much as 50 per cent today to lead a long list of rising prices on articles ranging from scrap steel to bonded whisky.

The Dun & Bradstreet wholesale food index rose Monday to $6.29, the second highest level it has reached since President Truman's decontrol order. It was $6.14 during the preceding week and $4.15 a year ago.

The highest index, representing the total price per pound of 31 foods in general use, was $6.34 recorded on Oct. 29.

Nearly 50,000 Cleveland Negroes agreed to boycott meat markets in Negro district markets for two weeks, charging they were paying one to 11 cents a pound more for poor grades of meat than markets in other retail stores were charging for better grades.

Retail food prices were reported moving upward a cent or two at a time in several large cities. Detroit and Washington, D. C., both reported that parking lot rates had jumped.

Many cities, however, including Minneapolis, Des Moines, Ia., Indianapolis and Salt Lake City reported no major increases and said manufacturers were hoping to keep prices as low as possible.

International Harvester company announced a nine per cent increase in the price of tractors and farm implements, based on "present higher wages and material costs." The company said it would not attempt "to anticipate future increases in these items."

Many large manufacturers and wholesalers said they would try to hold the price line for the present, but could not predict what would happen in the future.

Spokesmen for the soap industry said that despite the higher prices there would be only slight improvement in the supply of soap, which has been scarce for many months.

Increases were announced by three of the nation's leading soap manufacturers. At Cincinnati, Procter and Gamble company and M. Werx company announced that their six-ounce bars would sell for nine cents, an increase of three cents. Both companies announced that 21-ounce boxes of soap chips (Continued on Page Two)

Home Expediter Hopes Fast
Production Will Save
Veterans Program

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13—Housing Expediter Wilson W. Wyatt looked to assembly-line production today to help save his imperiled veterans housing program.

Whether he gets millions in government loans to finance unprecedented mass output of prefabricated houses apparently rested with President Truman.

Wyatt put the issue up to the President at a White House conference yesterday. Mr. Truman made no immediate comment.

The housing expediter gave no ground in his fight to spur production of conventional homes at prices veterans can afford.

But he told Mr. Truman the new price-free economy makes his pre-fab program "more important now than ever before." He reportedly told the President he is seriously concerned at what may happen to the cost of conventional houses now that ceilings have been removed from building materials.

While awaiting the President's decision, Wyatt scheduled further conferences with the Reconstruction Finance Corp., which has rejected most of his recommended loans as poor risks.

The advisory board of the office of war mobilization and reconversion meantime said Wyatt's home-building record so far "flatly contradicts" criticism that the program has bogged down.

But serious problems remain, the board warned.

HOPING FOR AGREEMENT

Federal Leaders Want To
Get Out Of Business
Held Since May

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13—Soft coal operators were brought back into the mine wage dispute today in a last-ditch administration attempt to get the government out of the coal business.

The operators were summoned into conference with Secretary of Interior J. A. Krug amid signs that the government was preparing a settlement formula to submit to them and John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers (AFL).

Krug, who negotiated the present government contract with Lewis, also scheduled a conference with Lewis at 2:30 p. m.

Although prospects did not appear bright, Krug hoped to promote an agreement between the operators and the union. Until that is done, the government cannot release the mines it seized last May.

Another stalemate between the industry and Lewis also would mean that the government itself would have to negotiate a new contract to prevent a strike of 400,000 soft coal miners. Under Lewis' interpretation of the present agreement, he can serve a notice Friday putting the miners on strike Nov. 20.

To avoid negotiating another agreement with the UMW, Krug was making a final effort to bring the owners and the union together so the government could release the mines. Because the miners will not work without a contract, the government will not let loose of the mines until a private agreement is negotiated.

Indications that the government was preparing concrete proposals recalled that a similar plan was followed two months ago in the now eight-month-old deadlock between the union and the operators. Government-sponsored conferences collapsed then in two days.

A workable settlement plan now must call for wage increases and shorter hours—which were not in dispute during the September conferences. Those negotiations broke down because southern operators balked at union demands for a welfare fund, a national safety code and union recognition for supervisors.

There was no optimism over the (Continued on Page Two)

DANIELS SEES LITTLE CHANCE OF 'HONEYMOON'

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13—"There ain't going to be any honeymoon."

That's how Josephus Daniels, Raleigh, N. C., publisher and secretary of Navy under President Woodrow Wilson, feels about the talk of harmony between President Truman and the new Republican congress.

Daniels, who called on the President yesterday, said there wouldn't be and shouldn't be any political honeymoon between the two major parties. Each has its own policies, he said, and should stand solidly behind them.

He said he hoped Mr. Truman had a "very big pen" to "veto as hard as nails" any reactionary legislation passed by the Republican congress. He expressed belief the Republicans would try to pass the Case labor bill, repeal the Wagner act, enact high tariffs and pass other legislation based on "old Republican ideals."

Daniels predicted there would be a stalemate in the government for the next two years similar to the one in 1918-20 when President Woodrow Wilson had to deal with a Republican congress.

KOREAN LEADER HURT

SEOUL, Korea, Nov. 13—Chang Taik-San, divisional police chief accused by extremists of collaboration with the Japanese was injured today when two assailants tossed a grenade and fired a rifle into his car.

The once-fiercy Fleming's body was little more than a skeleton as he lay motionless in his cell. His willpower seemed as strong as the iron bars restraining him, however, and he refused all pleas from family and friends to abandon his "fast to death."

Of the 1300 state employees who will be transferred Saturday, only 500 were with the state when the original transfer was made.

These changes helped to bring about the transfer of the state agency to federal control, with the understanding that as soon as the emergency was over the employment service was to return to state control.

outlook for a UMW-industry agreement because the union and the operators, particularly the southern group, still seemed poles apart on the issues that have separated them for eight months. Southern spokesmen have insisted they would never agree to unionization of supervisors before the supreme court had ruled on the bargaining rights of those employees.

Moreover, wage increase proposals would run into heavier resistance from the operators. Industry spokesmen have been sounding alarms over the rising of coal in relation to competitive fuels.

John D. Battle, executive secretary for the National Coal Association, said in a statement that Lewis' wage-hour demands were putting the coal industry on "the road to ruin."

He called Lewis a "despotic ruler of 400,000 miners" who was threatening to cut off the nation's coal supplies unless the government yielded to his demands.

At a 45-minute conference also attended by Reconstruction Director John Steelman and George Allen, a director of RFC, Wyatt told Mr. Truman this is no time to worry about ordinary business practice.

"It's a case of emergency money for emergency houses," he told reporters. He asked the President to reverse RFC's negative decisions. Wyatt has put before RFC loans totaling $90,000,000 to set up ten firms in the production of 106,000 pre-fabricated houses, most of them to be made of unconventional materials.

Other loans are to follow if the first group wins approval. Wyatt plans to build 850,000 industrialized houses as a part of a two-year program calling for 2,700,000 homes for veterans.

Wyatt told reporters it was true he was worried. But he denied rumors he would resign.

and powder which had been selling for 23 cents would cost the consumer from 12 to 14 cents more.

At New York, Lever Bros. Company announced wholesale prices boosts of about 50 per cent on all its soap products. Industry spokesmen said the costs of raw materials had risen about 125 per cent since decontrol.

Scrap steel brokers said prices have been hiked $2.50 per ton, and that the new price is being paid by most of the big steel mills. Harvey Kaplan, prominent Chicago broker, said the advance brought the base price for No. 1 and No. 2 heavy melting scrap to $20.75 per gross ton at Chicago and to $22.50 at Pittsburgh.

Despite the increase in scrap prices, the Bethlehem Steel Company announced at New York that it would try to hold present price levels. The company added, however, that it would have to raise prices if wages are increased either in the steel industry or by steel suppliers.

E. C. Grace, Bethlehem board chairman, said the policy of increasing costs and prices would lead to "unsoundness in our national economy."

Other metals, including copper, lead and zinc, were boosted 1-4 to 3-1-8 cents a pound yesterday in the first trading session since removal of OPA controls.

L. E. Osborne, vice-president of Westinghouse Electric Corp., predicted "some very moderate increases" in the price of certain electrical products. He added, however, that Westinghouse "recognizes the need for keeping prices as low as possible."

Meanwhile, the commodity credit corporation marked up the price of wool an average of five cents per pound.

ANDERSON SAYS MILK PRICES MUST BE LOWER

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 13—Secretary of Agriculture Clinton P. Anderson said today American people will not use all the milk they need until dairy prices are brought within reach of the average family.

He said dairy prices are likely to remain relatively high at least through 1947.

Anderson told the national co-operative milk producers federation that fluid milk and cream consumption jumped 26 per cent during the war despite higher prices. Whether it remains that high, he added, is another matter.

"Both industry and government have done a lot of educational work in the past few years on the essentiality of milk," he said. "But it was only when the consumer had money that he was able to indicate the extent to which our message influenced him...."

Possibly it is not too much of a truism to say that you don't form the habit of drinking milk by thinking about milk which isn't there or which you can't afford."

Anderson pointed out that fluid milk consumption already has started down from its wartime peaks, apparently as a result of recent price increases. But he said all the milk produced in 1947 should find good market at good prices.

WILSON SERVING 47TH SENTENCE IN COUNTY JAIL

Onno Wilson, 37, of 121 West Franklin street, Wednesday was spending his 47th sojourn in the Pickaway county jail.

Declaring that Wilson holds the record for jail attendance, Sheriff Charles Radcliff said that a check of official records showed Wilson has been committed to the county jail 47 times during the 16 years Sheriff Radcliff has been in charge. Deputies added that during that period Wilson has also at various times been a resident of jails at Dayton, Columbus, Xenia and other nearby cities.

Charges against Wilson, the records disclosed, included intoxication, disorderly conduct, and petty larceny.

Police arrested Wilson Saturday night for intoxication. Mayor Ben H. Gordon fined Wilson $25 plus $12 costs, Tuesday night, and committed him to the county jail. With fine and costs checked off at the rate of $3 a day Wilson is scheduled to remain in jail until Nov. 24.

When booked by police Saturday night Wilson gave his address as 121 West Franklin street—which is the location of the county jail.

BRITISH SHIPS CLEARING OUT CORFU STRAITS

fied Albania through the British embassy in Yugoslavia. The British, like the United States, do not maintain diplomatic relations with the current Albanian regime.

A foreign office source reported that the decision to sweep the channel was taken by the central military clearance board, upon which the big four powers including Russia are represented.

British sweepers were assigned to the task because the British fleet had the necessary craft available, according to dispatches reaching London.

In emphasizing that the four-power organization approved the sweeping, the foreign office hinted that Russia did not support the Albanian contention that the channel was not an international waterway, but came under Albanian sovereignty inasmuch as it lies within the three-mile limit.

The admiralty indicated that Britain would take an extremely serious view of the situation if the sweeping indicated that Albania had been mining the strait. The British contend that international law prohibits the mining of any waterway in peacetime without complete notice to all nations.

Byrnes To Oppose All Soviet Efforts To Get Troops Out Of Trieste

ministers meets at 4 p. m., est., today to begin a paragraph by paragraph discussion of the proposed statute for a free territory of Trieste as recommended, 15 to 6, by the Paris peace conference.

This represented an American victory over the Soviets and the first sign of possible progress on a major issue since the council opened here a week ago last Monday. Molotov unsuccessfully tried assembly sanction—a possibility which many considered highly doubtful—its outcome would delay night to delay again council consideration of Trieste but finally abandoned his proposal to send the issue back to the deputies in favor of Byrnes' plan to proceed.

At the same meeting Molotov failed to get the council to show any signs of encouragement to Italy and Yugoslavia who have been lately indicated a desire to try to reach agreement by direct negotiations on pending issues between them, including Trieste and their future frontier.

The council may decide today whether it will reply, as a council, to Italian notes sent to each of the big four expressing Italy's willingness, under certain conditions, to negotiate with Yugoslavia.

peaches, pears, plums and truck year's historic output were record crops of wheat, potatoes, tobacco, crops and near-record yields of oats, rice, soybeans, peanuts, grapes, cherries and sugar cane.

Better than average crops included hay, flaxseed, sorghum grain, buckwheat, dry peas, sweet potatoes, prunes, apricots, hops and sugar beets. Only the cotton, rye, broomcorn dry bean and pecans yields were below average. The department said most fall grains already have been planted and are making good progress which may set the stage for another big grain yield next year.

WILSON SERVING 47TH SENTENCE IN COUNTY JAIL

Onno Wilson, 37, of 121 West Franklin street, Wednesday was spending his 47th sojourn in the Pickaway county jail.

Declaring that Wilson holds the record for jail attendance, Sheriff Charles Radcliff said that a check of official records showed Wilson has been committed to the county jail 47 times during the 16 years Sheriff Radcliff has been in charge. Deputies added that during that period Wilson has also at various times been a resident of jails at Dayton, Columbus, Xenia and other nearby cities.

Charges against Wilson, the records disclosed, included intoxication, disorderly conduct, and petty larceny.

Police arrested Wilson Saturday night for intoxication. Mayor Ben H. Gordon fined Wilson $25 plus $12 costs, Tuesday night, and committed him to the county jail. With fine and costs checked off at the rate of $3 a day Wilson is scheduled to remain in jail until Nov. 24. When booked by police Saturday night Wilson gave his address as 121 West Franklin street—which is the location of the county jail.

These developments added to the certainty of a bitter duel between a large Russian-led bloc of European and Latin American countries on the one hand and the Anglo-American delegations on the other when the Spanish controversy breaks into the open in the assembly's political and security committee.

It remained a backstage affair today, however, as delegates gathered for new rounds in the battles over UN trusteeships and the projected international refugee organization.

COLUMBUS, Nov. 13—Farmer-committeemen who will be responsible for local administration of most of the government's farm-act programs in Ohio will be elected December 19, Elmer F. Kruse, director of the Production and Marketing Administration said today.

on the union's demand for union security. The agreement must be ratified by both union and association members.

Feinsinger said all but a few obstacles had been removed for settlement of the CIO longshoremen's strike against waterfront employees, and he hoped for "complete agreement" by nightfall. A third striking union, the AFL Masters, Mates and Pilots, continued negotiations with shipowners.

In the air line strike, Mayor Fletcher Bowron of Los Angeles and the Kansas City Chamber of Commerce both called for government operation of the line pending settlement of the pilots' strike. Bowron said TWA had cancelled an order for planes built in Los Angeles as a result of the strike. Kansas City was affected adversely, the Chamber of Commerce said, because it is the air line's headquarters.

KEEN VETERANS KEEP TEACHERS ON THEIR TOES

Widely-Travelled Former GIs
Make Professors Throw
Away Old Notes

BY KENNETH FORD

United Press Staff Correspondent
CLEVELAND—With the nation's colleges and universities registering the largest number of students in their histories, educators are finding lack of space not the only consideration.

A student-veteran at Western Reserve University recently told a professor at the end of a lecture: "That was the stupidest lecture I've ever heard."

A college official substantiated the story. He said, "With veterans comprising about 85 per cent of our registration, the performance of teachers is being challenged for the first time by their students."

"Teachers have had to throw their old lecture notes out the window," said M. B. Tolar, mathematics department head at Penn College. "We've had to acquire a whole new body of knowledge to keep space of the widely-travelled and experienced G. I."

School officials characterize it—"the best thing that ever happened to education." It makes their work more interesting, they say. The student-veteran in composition classes is able to substitute experience for imagination, an English professor said. George Grauel, English teacher at John Carroll University, finds he doesn't have to assign them subjects. They draw on their own experiences, writing about "Flying the Hump," "The Black Market in France," or "Habitats of the Burmese."

Shine in Mathematics

This ability of veteran-students was noted in other courses, such as mathematics, where former air corps navigators taught their teachers a few short cuts.

Richard McClelland, 22-year-old senior at Reserve and former air corps lieutenant, may be a typical veteran-student. McClelland sums up the veteran's case in this way: "The G.I. wants to make up the years he lost in the service. He hasn't time to listen to a lot of pointless words coming out of some professor. We want him to lay it on the line."

Campus activities and politics also have undergone an overhauling. Students consensus is that fraternities aren't going to control campus politics any longer. The veteran-students in fraternities have bolted the bloc. They've become independent and don't care who's elected as long as he's a good man for the job.

Interested in Athletics

McClelland said the veteran-student is not a pre-war "rah-rah guy." "He is still interested in athletics, as he was in service, and in other college activities, but he won't let them interfere with his studies," McClelland said.

"In bull sessions, the men talk about politics and world problems. They talk about peace, but don't know any more than anybody else about how to get it. One thing they're certain of—they won't go back in the army; and they have a very low opinion of professional military men."

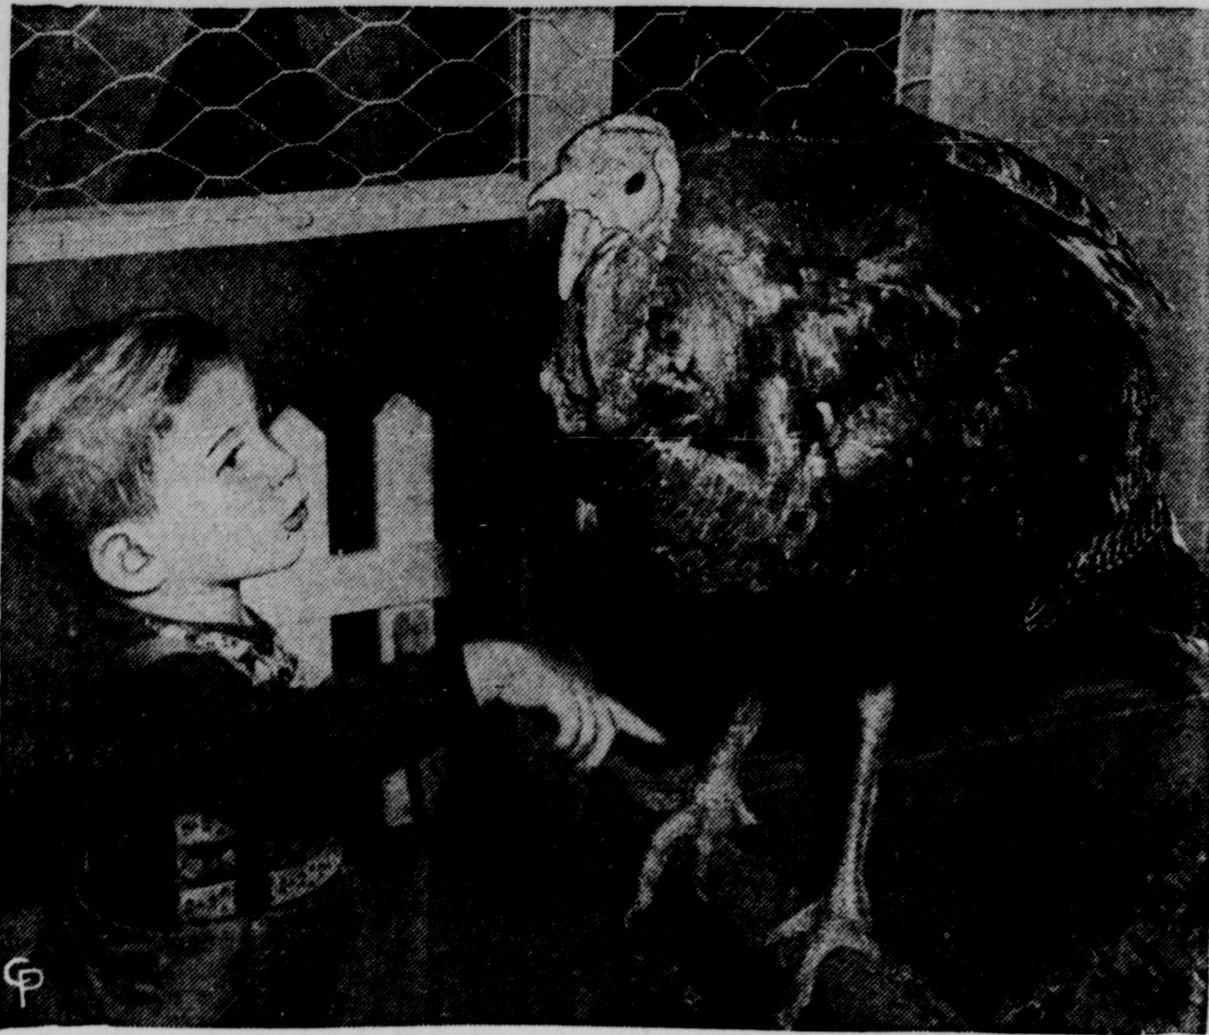

Of far greater importance is the revolutionary change that the war has brought to college curricula and to the whole concept of the purpose of education, a Reserve official said. It was the great scientific progress during the war that caused educators to reevaluate their responsibilities.

Many Cleveland educators are convinced a revision of curricula is needed. They believe greater emphasis is to be placed on liberal arts courses—the so-called humanities—which are calculated to equip people with the understanding needed in present times.

PHONE PRIORITY TO GO

Nineteen States Offer UN Permanent Homes

LAKE SUCCESS, N. Y., Nov. 13 —The United Nations has so many prospective homes it doesn't know what to do.

Nineteen states, with varying degrees of hysteria, are clamoring to be the permanent home of UN. The UN headquarters committee, charged with selecting a site, is frankly bewildered—and frightened—that the dispute may continue for months.

Harassed by oily-voiced lobbyists from chambers of commerce, the committee called a special meeting today to try to speed selection of a site. Big powers favored appointing a subcommittee to inspect some of the more promising sites.

San Francisco's bid for UN headquarters won fresh support. A source close to the Soviet delegation said Russia was ready to back the San Francisco bay area when the issue reaches a showdown.

Russia previously was understood to favor the British proposal to put headquarters in the north-eastern part of the United States. Byelo-Russia, a member of the Soviet bloc, has urged the UN to move into the League of Nations buildings in Geneva, Switzerland, but there was little indication that Russia would press the suggestion.

San Francisco, New York, Philadelphia and Boston are given the best chances of winning the UN headquarters.

Sites proposed to the headquarters committee include:
California—San Francisco bay area, Angels Island and Pleasanton.
Colorado—Denver area.
Minnesota—Duluth area.
New York—Port Jervis, Saratoga Springs, Hyde Park, Kingston, Navy Island at Niagara Falls and the Bronx and Flushing Meadows in New York City.

VETERANS WITH DISABILITY TO BE ENLISTED

In another move to bring skilled personnel into the United States Army, and also to offer the Army as a career to many men heretofore barred from such an opportunity because of a disability caused by honorable service, Capt. Thomas J. Madigan, Jr., of the Columbus Army recruiting station announced today that certain categories of disabled veterans would be accepted for enlistment in the Regular Army.

"Recognizing that many men disabled in service are desirous of an Army career and that many of these men have proven themselves able and skilled by winning over their handicaps, the War Department has directed that an initial 5000 partially disabled veterans will be accepted for service in the Regular Army," he said.

Explaining that this action comes as an official recognition of the fine character and strength exhibited by the majority of our disabled men, and provides the Army the opportunity of action in helping to place our disabled men in normal and happy positions, Capt. Madigan pointed out that the Army does not consider the move as helping the handi-

"Recognizing that many men disabled in service are desirous of an Army career and that many of these men have proven themselves able and skilled by winning over their handicaps, the War Department has directed that an initial 5000 partially disabled veterans will be accepted for service in the Regular Army," he said.

Explaining that this action comes as an official recognition of the fine character and strength exhibited by the majority of our disabled men, and provides the Army the opportunity of action in helping to place our disabled men in normal and happy positions, Capt. Madigan pointed out that the Army does not consider the move as helping the handi-

TRUMAN COULD GIVE JOBS TO 15 DEMOCRATS

Posts Paying From $10,000 To $25,000 Open In Federal Service

BY DAYTON MOORE
United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON, Nov. 13—President Truman has available 15 jobs paying $10,000 a year and upwards if he wants to keep some of the defeated Democratic congressmen in the federal government.

The vacant posts range from chief of the agriculture department's production and marketing administration, $10,000 a year, to ambassador to Great Britain, $25,000 a year plus a fat expense allowance.

All of the jobs, except the agricultural post, are to be filled by presidential appointment. They must be confirmed by the senate. And the Republican majority easily could block them.

Republican leaders in the senate have not said yet whether they will adopt a general policy toward presidential appointments. They might refuse to confirm any, if Mr. Truman does not give a share of the top patronage to Republicans. Or they might consider each appointment on its individual merits and political angles.

The available jobs, and annual salaries, are:

Ambassador to Great Britain, $25,000 plus allowances.

Ambassador to Spain, salary not yet set under new law but expected to be around $20,000 plus allowances.

Ambassador to India, expected to be around $17,500 plus allowances.

Federal reserve board, $15,000.

Associate justice of Puerto Rican supreme court, $15,000.

Federal loan administrator, $12,500.

Maritime commission, $10,000.

Federal communications commission, $10,000.

Interstate commerce commission, two commissioners, $12,000. There now is one vacancy. The term of another commissioner expires Dec. 31.

Undersecretary of commerce, $10,000. Undersecretary Alfred Schindler has said that he will resign, probably before Jan. 1.

Assistant secretary of state, $10,000.

Solicitor general, $10,000, and assistant attorney general, $10,000.

Production and marketing administrator, $10,000.

The chairmanship of the federal communications commission reportedly is being held open for Paul Porter if he wants to return to it after he finishes as price administrator. But he might prefer to accept a business offer.

Diplomatic sources said U. S. disapproval of the Franco government was a major factor in the ambassadorship to Spain having been left vacant since Norman Armour resigned early this year.

The post of federal loan administrator has been vacant for 18 months. RFC Chairman Charles B. Henderson has been acting administrator, but has not drawn any extra salary for it.

The vacancy on the federal reserve board is 10 years old. It has been hoped that congress would change the law to permit the secretary of treasury to be a member of the board.

SCIENTIST SEES MANY BENEFITS OF ATOM STUDY

Expense Of Research To Be Repaid Many Times By Bettering Health

BY PAUL F. ELLIS
United Press Science Writer
CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 13—The $2,000,000 spent in the development of the atom bomb "will eventually be repaid many times over in the years to come" through use of radioactive isotopes in increasing commercial production and bettering the health of the nation, an expert in nuclear science predicted today.

The scientist, Dr. Andrew H. Dowdy, professor of radiology and director of the Manhattan department of the University of Rochester, told the 74th annual meeting of the American Public Health association that 150 applications for isotopes—the radioactive by-products of the uranium chain reacting piles—had been made so far, and that a "vast majority have been approved."

He said that the isotope carbon 14 "seems likely to become one of the most important that will be utilized as a 'tool' of medical science. This may be the answer to cancer."

Dowdy said scientists will strive in the next few years to find or synthesize chemicals which react against cancer. Then the next step, he said, will be to select a radioactive isotope and blend or synthesize it with the chemical compound.

"By so doing," he said, "the cancer could be attacked by a chemical toxin and an internal radiation limited primarily to the site or sites involved by the cancer tissue. Such a possibility is not an idle dream."

"The real solution for the cancer problem does not lie in its surgical and radiation treatment. Rather does it lie in discovering the fundamental principle or principles wherein a healthy cell escapes its normal growth restraints and disregards its function as a serviceable unit of an organized whole."

Surgery is the No. 1 weapon today against cancer, although several hospitals are experimenting with the radioactive carbon and phosphorus. Radioactive iodine has been used with good results against cancer of the thyroid. Experts in cancer research seem to be agreed that more knowledge was needed of the cancer cell—what makes it grow and what can be done to convert it back to a normal cell.

Dr. Dowdy said that the atom bomb chain reaction piles are now producing many types of isotopes, including such types as sulfur, iodine, potassium, hydrogen, iron, arsenic, sodium and phosphorus.

"Should no advantage other than the quantity production of a large number of isotopes accrue from the Manhattan project, the expenditure of $2,000,000,000 will eventually be repaid many times over in the years to come from increased commercial production and better health to the nation," he said.

The first government life-saving stations, which were just boat houses, were erected along the coast of New Jersey in 1848.

TIPS GIVEN ON STORING SPUDS

Largest Crop Of Potatoes Is Now Flooding Storage Space Of Distributors

Tips on how to store the record crop of potatoes are being given by producers, distributors and the federal government as the largest crop on record floods food warehouses.

Consumers are urged to buy their winter's supply and store them at home. For good storage, these suggestions are offered:

1. Store only mature, sound, dry potatoes.
2. Store in a cool dry, dark place (temperature 40 to 60 degrees).
3. Store in slatted crates or bins raised from the floor to provide ventilation.
4. Inspect occasionally for keeping qualities and sort potatoes regularly.

Where no storage facilities are available, potatoes can be kept satisfactorily into January if purchased in 15 to 50 pound paper containers and left in the bags. Keep the bags in the coolest part of the house. The paper containers prevent the rapid loss of moisture, there is less shriveling in paper bags and there is no danger of the tubers greening from light.

If adequate storage space is available, it is possible to store your entire supply of potatoes into June. When the temperature rises in the storage room, the window should be opened during the cold days and closed when the temperature drops to the required level. Be sure to keep light from shining into the storage.

MOTHER OF 25 HAS TROUBLE FINDING NAMES

LAMESA, Tex., Nov. 13—Mrs. Bernardino Lopez, who has given birth to 25 children in the last 33 years, complained today that she was running out of names for her offspring.

Mrs. Lopez was a slender girl of 11 and Lopez was 13, when they married at Uvalde, Tex., in 1913. Both had come there from Monterey, Mexico. Their first child was born a year later.

The 25th—an eight-pound girl—arrived Sunday.

Mrs. Lopez, now 43 and plump, said she named her new baby "Sunday" after her birthday because she and Lopez couldn't think of anything else. Twelve of their children are living. All 25 were born singly.

Mrs. Lopez' birth record came to light by accident. While filling out a birth certificate, Dr. A. H. Smith, who delivered the baby Sunday at the Lopez home, asked the mother how many children she had.

"This is the 25th, doctor," said Mrs. Lopez.

"You don't understand," said Smith. "I asked how many children you've had."

Mrs. Lopez insisted the number was 25. An investigation produced records which substantiated the claim, Smith said.

When he returned to the Lopez home to examine the mother and baby, he found Mrs. Lopez preparing breakfast. Lopez, a day laborer, was in bed asleep.

Smith ordered Mrs. Lopez to bed for a week's rest.

"I have too many things to do around the house," she protested. "Too many mouths to feed."

SALLY TAKES HER COSTUME TO COURT TODAY

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 13—Sally Rand took her fans and G-string to court today to prove she was artistically attired when she was arrested for indecency.

The 42-year-old blonde striptease was arrested Oct. 31 by Sgt. W. H. Madden, who said she was wearing only talcum powder and the 1½ by 30 inch flesh-colored G-string. Madden said he sat through the entire performance, (in line of duty) and saw nothing but Miss Rand behind her freely-waving fans.

She was arraigned between performances on charges of taking part in a show which tended to corrupt morals, then went back to fulfill her four-day engagement. The dancer refused to produce the G-string for evidence.

"I was wearing it, but I absolutely refuse to give it up," she said. "It was my usual full costume."

PERSONAL TOUCH

RELATIONS today between employer and employe are suffering from the lack of contact of the workers with the man who provides him with the job.

When organizations were small enough to permit close personal relationships, a better understanding was easy to achieve. In a large organization employing hundreds of persons, the individual worker is apt to feel that he is unimportant and that his grievances go unnoticed. Feeling like this, a man is vulnerable to the arguments of leftist labor organizers who propagandize him by word of mouth and by printed material, increasing his feelings of frustration and animosity.

A remedy for this situation has been found by some large companies who sponsor recreation departments. Run by social-minded employes, the activities of these departments include athletic teams, camera clubs, fishing clubs, groups of stamp collectors and of other hobbyists.

Workers of all ranks are thus brought together and bound by interests outside their daily work. While this is, in a sense, an artificial solution of the problem, it has helped, as the happy, friendly atmosphere of factories sponsoring such activities testifies. But this is true only where workers have merely been given opportunity and encouragement for activities developed by themselves without any suspicion of "paternalism" used for ulterior motives.

THE HORSES LIKED IT

EVEN strikes have their pleasant side. So at least was the case with 780 horses who have been enjoying a month's pasturing at Yarmouth near Portland, Me. As part of an UNRRA consignment, they were destined for Poland to plow war torn fields. The maritime strike held their ship in port. Consequently the animals had a pleasant vacation—at the cost of $2,000 a day—while ship operators and unions thrashed out a settlement. No one as yet has decided how the vacation cost will be met. But that's often the way with vacations.

Anyway the horses had a pleasanter time in those Maine meadows than they'll have again for many a day.

IMMORTAL RAGWEED

HERE is a blow to hay fever sufferers. Ragweed, potent cause of their ills, cannot be eliminated, says the Journal of the American Medical Association. It has too many seeds which escape all campaigns of destruction by lurking in the soil. No matter how thoroughly a community tries to root out the pest, there seems to be just as much ragweed the following year. Even if it were killed in any one area, there is always the outside world to supply more. Pollen has been known to be blown as far as 50 to 75 miles.

Maybe inoculation is the cure. Either that or a permanent sea voyage.

By JACK GAVER

NEW YORK, Nov. 13—Pre-war glitter marked the opening of the 62nd season of the Metropolitan Opera, but there was one obvious lack. Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt didn't show.

The dowager queen of New York society, whose presence has put the official stamp on MET openings for years, is in Hot Springs for her health. Occupying her famous box No. 3 of the "Diamond Horseshoe," which once again lived up to its name, was Miss Margaret Truman, who had made no secret of her desire to be an opera singer. In fact, the president's daughter was accompanied by her singing teacher, Mrs. T. J. Strickler of Kansas City, Mo.

But the performance of Leo Delibes' 63-year-old "Lakme" was attended by most of the regulars, who spare no pains to impress each other—and the press photographers—with their gowns and jewelry. Mrs. George Washington Kavanaugh, whose diamond tiara bounced forward onto her nose as she was leaving; Mrs. Thelma Chrysler Foy, Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney, Ganna Walska (no bare midriff this year), Mrs. Cornelius Dresselhuys and the Duchess de Tallyrand were a few of these.

The display of finery was considerably above that of last year, when the opening came only a few months after the war's end. Notable was the return of white tie and tails and opera hats for men. The penguin suits were in such number that lesser mortals in black tie and dinner jackets were lost in the shuffle. There were even a few opera cloaks, with resplendent linings, draped over masculine shoulders. Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, of course, stuck to the navy blue.

French Ambassador Henri Bonnet, Premier George A. Drew of Ontario, Former Ambassador James W. Gerard, Sir John Anderson, Former British chancellor of the exchequer, Portuguese ambassador Jose Antonio de Bianchi, and Jan Papanek and Eelco van Kleffens, respectively the Czech and Dutch representatives with the United Nations, were among the notables attending.

It had rained lightly before curtain time and late arrivals delayed the start by 15 minutes. The huge auditorium was filled with a $15,000 audience. As usual the crowd stayed with the show pretty well for the first act, while Lakme, played by Lily Pons, was falling in love with a hated Briton as no Indian maid should do, but after the first intermission had permitted a visit to the second floor bar there were a lot of delinquents. A number just stayed in the bar, others went back to the auditorium but came out occasionally for refreshments.

It seems that opera goers must get most of the applause out of their systems during the show. I know that the palm-beating at the end was scarcely more than polite, with everyone in the orchestra running for the exits, and that even a Broadway dud gets a better hand at the close. However, this didn't deter Miss Pons and the other leading players from taking four bows.

The opera marked the debut of Miss Irene Jordan, of Birmingham, Ala., a mezzo-soprano, who had the role of Lakme's slave. Critics gave her a nice welcome. It also marked the last time that Hugh R. Brown, house superintendent, will take opening night tickets at the center door after 37 years with the MET. He is retiring soon.

An Annoying Nasal Disorder

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

FEW things are more irritating or disagreeable than a continuous discharge from the nose. Fortunately, however, this condition seldom endangers health.

As a matter of fact, the normal nasal mucous secretion has a protective action, and only when it contains dangerous germs is it harmful when swallowed. Most people become conscious of it only when, because of some change in the lining membrane of the nose, the mucous secretion becomes excessive, unusually thick, irritating, or bad smelling.

Use of Drugs

According to Dr. Arthur W. Proetz of St. Louis, there are many things which may cause such changes. He believes that the use of drugs over a prolonged period may change a minor disorder of the nose into a prolonged or chronic condition. For example, when certain preparations are put into the nose which shrink the lining membrane, drying out of the tissues results. This is followed by congestion in the nose and a change in the mucous secretion. Then, too, Dr. Proetz believes that certain chemical substances put into these drugs to preserve them may also have an irritating effect.

Many doctors are of the opinion that excessive smoking also will tend to increase the quantity of mucus in the nose and throat, as well as cause undue irritation. In addition, the use of alcoholic beverages may cause the blood vessels in the nose to dilate and the lining membrane to swell.

Water Evaporates Quickly

If persons live in overheated air with little moisture in the air, water evaporates quickly from the mucus in the nose. This mucus then becomes thickened and accumulates in the nose. Dust also at first causes an increase in the mucous secretion because of the irritation of the nose, but later this mucus becomes thicker. There are certain diseases which also may change the mucous secretion in the nose. These include diabetes, kidney inflammation, colitis, and constipation. Even such things as fear and prolonged anxiety may cause the nose and throat to become dry.

Thus it can be seen that there are many things which may lead to changes in the nasal secretion and, particularly, to the formation of an excessive amount of mucus. The affected person should have a complete physical examination and also a careful study by a nose and throat specialist. When the cause of the difficulty is found, effective treatment may be carried out.

CHAPTER TWENTY-TWO

AT DINNER in a small and what Lydia supposed was also an exclusive place the Hardings' loquacity, although both intelligent and interesting, seemed to Lydia to try to cover up the embarrassment their granddaughter had created. It was as if by keeping the conversational ball rolling they hoped to make their guests forget it.

But they themselves could not forget it and it had spoiled the evening for them. It was strange, Lydia thought, that a man of Mr. Harding's reputation and brilliance could be so troubled by a child's innocent remarks to a wounded former soldier. If she had known them better, she would have said, But Chris and I can forget it—we've beaten that phase of it, his extreme sensitivity—if you would let us. But we're embarrassed because you are. Our pity for you is much greater than yours for us. If you would come out in the open and speak of it, we'd all feel so much better.

The restaurant was crowded and the waiters frantically busy. Thus it was not surprising that one of them knocked Chris's cane to the floor. It came down with a clatter.

Lydia's heart sank, not because of Chris, but because of the Hardings, who, before they had excommunicated themselves of one ordeal with a handicapped veteran, were now faced with another. Mrs. Harding's face seemed to go up in flames.

The waiter, murmuring profuse apologies, returned the cane to Chris.

Chris said, "It's perfectly all right. It is a bit of a nuisance." He was completely at ease when he turned to the Hardings. "I see I've got to get along without it."

"Yes," Mr. Harding replied crisply. He cleared his throat and spoke fast. "A awful small place, this. Mrs. Harding and I have been coming here for years, but the service is not what it was. You'll have more wine, Mrs. Stark? Of course you will. Good vintage. And besides, it's a cold night." He added with an attempt at humor, "And I wonder, what with the low decolletage, why you and Mrs. Harding aren't freezing."

Though they arrived at the theater before curtain time, others who had seats in the same row did not. Consequently after they were settled, they had to rise, not once, but several times, to permit the late comers passage. That Chris was slow and somewhat awkward in getting to his feet caused one woman to give him a dark look of disgust at his tardiness. Once more his cane fell with a clatter. Lydia felt Chris's quickened breath. The Hardings signed. And the exasperating little performance had to be repeated again between acts.

When they came out of the theater Mr. Harding, a man to see things through, suggested a nightcap. Several minutes later a taxi deposited them at the door of a well-known night club.

No sooner were they seated when Lydia was aware that the Hardings thought they had erred again in suggesting a place where there was dancing.

She saw that the silence of embarrassment lay upon them again. Chris inhaled his cigarette and sat back in his chair and scanned the dancers.

"Wouldn't you and Mrs. Harding like to dance?" he asked. Lydia and I have put it off for a future date."

"No," Mrs. Harding said quickly, too quickly. "We really don't care to. It's so crowded."

Mr. Harding's shrewd eyes narrowed. He looked as if he had had enough when he said, "I'm afraid this has been a bad night for you, my boy. I'm terribly sorry."

Chris's fair head came up as he leaned forward and clasped the glass in his hand. He smiled.

"It reminds me a little of a letter I got the other day from a former classmate who lost a leg in Italy and got an artificial one. I can't repeat it exactly, but it goes something like this: 'When I got my new leg and went back to the office, no one would say anything about it. I was sensitive at first. At first I didn't WANT anyone to say anything about it. Then I realized that they were having a rough time of it than I was, that they were MORE sensitive about it than I and constantly on guard lest they hurt my feelings. Then I was sorer for them than they were for me. It was like a secret between us. I knew it couldn't go on like that. They were so uncomfortable they made me uncomfortable. Something had to be done to break the ice so that we could be natural with each other. I hit on it one day when three of us were walking down some steps. My leg needed an adjustment and it made an awful noise. The others heard it, too, and looked as though they wanted to fall through. They were suffering with embarrassment. I said, 'Listen to the blamed thing, will you?' They looked at me and burst out laughing. 'Everything's all right now. The secret's been uncovered and no one is embarrassed or on guard or strained. It's a big relief to me.' Chris looked at the Hardings' immensely relieved faces. "What your granddaughter said, the waiter knocking the cane down, and people dancing when I can't. . . it doesn't matter. Nothing matters but the fact that you're alive."

Mrs. Harding's eyes looked a little misty. Mr. Harding cleared his throat.

"So you see," Chris said, "Lydia and I haven't minded nearly as much as you."

"That's a wonderful way to look at it," Mrs. Harding said. "We're very stupid, I suppose. Or perhaps we civilians haven't made our own adjustments." "Correctly."

"Splendid spirit you have," Mrs. Harding said. "Splendid. Perhaps Mrs. Harding and I will dance after all. We don't do this sort of thing often and I know that she, she smiled across the table, "does like to dance when the music is as good as this. Would you, Elizabeth?"

"I'd love to, Charles."

"Well done," she said. "Everything's all right now."

"I haven't had a minute with you," he said.

She laughed. "They're nice. I like both of them. He reminds me a little of a bulldog we used to have at home. Terribly ferocious looking, but the kindest pet in the neighborhood. But don't ever tell him."

Chris said, "He was decent when I told him I wasn't ready to come back. Decent, but he needs me. He made that clear, too. I—I haven't much time."

Not much time and not much money. . . . She found that she was pulling at the lace on her handkerchief under the table.

But they turned their best faces when Mr. and Mrs. Harding joined them again.

YOU MUST NOT PASS IT

AFTER IT has been shown that your side possesses game strength—by an original suit bid of two, by a single jump bid at some stage, or by a cue-bid of an opponent's suit—your side should almost never settle for less than a game contract or a double that promises a satisfactory number of points. When such a game-guarantee situation applies to your side, a pass by either partner is a "forcing pass," obligating his mate to take action of some kind rather than let the bidding close with the opponents undoubted or his own side in less than a game contract.

a call of 4-Clubs, which North could have carried to 5-Clubs. But when East took away the necessity for South to decide, by making his bid of 4-Hearts, South inserted a forcing pass, "passing the buck" back to North. That was an absolute force upon North to bid or double. With vulnerability as it was, his best call would have been 5-Clubs, which could have been made with the loss of one trick each in the red suits. If he felt that was precarious, he should have doubled the 4-Hearts rather than pass.

As it was, North and South got a dinky 100 points for setting East two tricks not doubled, with two in spades, one in hearts and two in diamonds, whereas the worst should have been with that contract doubled, producing 300. "Don't pass a forcing pass" would be a good way to codify procedure in such cases.

I know that the palm-beating at the end was scarcely more than polite, with everyone in the orchestra running for the exits, and that even a Broadway dud gets a better hand at the close. However, this didn't deter Miss Pons and the other leading players from taking four bows.

The opera marked the debut of Miss Irene Jordan, of Birmingham, Ala., a mezzo-soprano, who had the role of Lakme's slave. Critics gave her a nice welcome. It also marked the last time that Hugh R. Brown, house superintendent, will take opening night tickets at the center door after 37 years with the MET. He is retiring soon.

DIET AND HEALTH

An Annoying Nasal Disorder

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

FEW things are more irritating or disagreeable than a continuous discharge from the nose. Fortunately, however, this condition seldom endangers health.

As a matter of fact, the normal nasal mucous secretion has a protective action, and only when it contains dangerous germs is it harmful when swallowed. Most people become conscious of it only when, because of some change in the lining membrane of the nose, the mucous secretion becomes excessive, unusually thick, irritating, or bad smelling.

Use of Drugs

According to Dr. Arthur W. Proetz of St. Louis, there are many things which may cause such changes. He believes that the use of drugs over a prolonged period may change a minor disorder of the nose into a prolonged or chronic condition. For example, when certain preparations are put into the nose which shrink the lining membrane, drying out of the tissues results. This is followed by congestion in the nose and a change in the mucous secretion. Then, too, Dr. Proetz believes that certain chemical substances put into these drugs to preserve them may also have an irritating effect. Many doctors are of the opinion that excessive smoking also will tend to increase the quantity of mucus in the nose and throat, as well as cause undue irritation. In addition, the use of alcoholic beverages may cause the blood vessels in the nose to dilate and the lining membrane to swell.

Water Evaporates Quickly

If persons live in overheated air with little moisture in the air, water evaporates quickly from the mucus in the nose. This mucus then becomes thickened and accumulates in the nose. Dust also at first causes an increase in the mucous secretion because of the irritation of the nose, but later this mucus becomes thicker. There are certain diseases which also may change the mucous secretion in the nose. These include diabetes, kidney inflammation, colitis, and constipation. Even such things as fear and prolonged anxiety may cause the nose and throat to become dry.

Thus it can be seen that there are many things which may lead to changes in the nasal secretion and, particularly, to the formation of an excessive amount of mucus. The affected person should have a complete physical examination and also a careful study by a nose and throat specialist. When the cause of the difficulty is found, effective treatment may be carried out.

CHAPTER TWENTY-TWO

AT DINNER in a small and exclusive place the Hardings' loquacity, although both intelligent and interesting, seemed to Lydia to try to cover up the embarrassment their granddaughter had created. It was as if by keeping the conversational ball rolling they hoped to make their guests forget it.

But they themselves could not forget it and it had spoiled the evening for them. It was strange, Lydia thought, that a man of Mr. Harding's reputation and brilliance could be so troubled by a child's innocent remarks to a wounded former soldier. If she had known them better, she would have said. But Chris and I can forget it—we've beaten that phase of it, his extreme sensitivity—if you would let us. But we're embarrassed because you are. Our pity for you is much greater than yours for us. If you would come out in the open and speak of it, we'd all feel so much better.

The restaurant was crowded and the waiters frantically busy. Thus it was not surprising that one of them knocked Chris's cane to the floor. It came down with a clatter.

Lydia's heart sank, not because of Chris, but because of the Hardings, who, before they had exorcised themselves of one ordeal with a handicapped veteran, were now faced with another. Mrs. Harding's face seemed to go up in flames.

The waiter, murmuring profuse apologies, returned the cane to Chris.

Chris said, "It's perfectly all right. It is a bit of a nuisance." He was completely at ease when he turned to the Hardings. "I see I've got to get along without it."

"Yes," Mr. Harding replied quickly. He cleared his throat and spoke fast. "Awfully small place, this. Mrs. Harding and I have been coming here for years, but the service is not what it was. You'll have more wine, Mrs. Stark? Of course you will. Good vintage. And besides, it's a cold night." He added with an attempt at humor, "And I wonder, what with the low decolletage, why you and Mrs. Harding aren't freezing."

Though they arrived at the table before curtain time, others who had seats in the same row did not. Consequently after they were settled, they had to rise, not once, but several times, to permit the late comers passage. That Chris was slow and somewhat awkward in getting to his feet caused one woman to give him a dark look of disgust at his tardiness. Once more his cane fell with a clatter. Lydia felt Chris's quickened breath. The Hardings sighed. And the exasperating little performance had to be repeated again between acts.

When they came out of the theater Mr. Harding, a man to see things through, suggested a nightcap. Several minutes later a taxi deposited them at the door of a well-known night club.

No sooner were they seated when Lydia was aware that the Hardings thought they had erred again in suggesting a place where there was dancing.

She saw that the silence of embarrassment lay upon them again. Chris inhaled his cigarette and sat back in his chair and scanned the dancers.

"Wouldn't you and Mrs. Harding like to dance?" he asked. Lydia and I have put it off for a future date.

"No," Mrs. Harding said quickly, too quickly. "We really don't care to. It's so crowded."

Mr. Harding's shrewd eyes narrowed. He looked as if he had had enough when he said, "I'm afraid there has been a bad night for you, my boy. I'm terribly sorry."

Chris's fair head came up as he leaned forward and clasped the glass in his hand. He smiled.

"It reminds me a little of a letter I got the other day from a former classmate who lost a leg in Italy and got an artificial one. I can't repeat it exactly, but it goes something like this: 'When I got my new leg and went back to the office, no one would say anything about it. I was sensitive about it then I and constantly on guard lest they hurt my feelings. Then I was sorrier for them than they were for me. It was like a secret between us. I knew it couldn't go on like that. They were so uncomfortable they made me uncomfortable. Something had to be done to break the ice so that we could be natural with each other. I hit on it one day when three of us were walking down some steps. My leg needed an adjustment and it made an awful noise. The others heard it, too, and looked as though they wanted to fall through. They were suffering with embarrassment. I said, 'Listen to the blamed thing, will you?' They looked at me and burst out laughing. 'Everything's all right now. The secret's been uncovered and no one is embarrassed or on guard or strained. It's a big relief to me.' Chris looked at the Hardings' immensely relieved faces. "What your granddaughter said, the waiter knocking the cane down, and people dancing when I can't... it doesn't matter. Nothing matters but the fact that you're alive."

Mrs. Harding's eyes looked a little misty. Mr. Harding cleared his throat.

"So you see," Chris said, "Lydia and I haven't minded nearly as much as you."

"That's a wonderful way to look at it," Mrs. Harding said. "We're very stupid, I suppose. Or perhaps we civilians haven't made our own adjustments yet."

"Splendid spirit you have," Mr. Harding said. "Splendid. Perhaps Mrs. Harding and I will dance after all. We don't do this sort of thing often and I know that she," he smiled across the table, "does like to dance when the music is as good as this. Would you, Elizabeth?"

"I'd love to, Charles."

"Well done," she said. "Everything's all right now."

"I haven't had a minute with you," he said.

She laughed. "They're nice. I like both of them. He reminds me a little of a bulldog we used to have at home. Terribly ferocious looking, but the kindest pet in the neighborhood. But don't ever tell him."

Chris said, "He was decent when I told him I wasn't ready to come back. Decent, but he needs me. He made that clear, too. I—I haven't much time."

Not much time and not much money. . . . She found that she was pulling at the lace on her handkerchief under the table.

But they turned their best faces when Mr. and Mrs. Harding joined them again.

YOU MUST NOT PASS IT

AFTER IT has been shown that your side possesses game strength—by an original suit bid of two, by a single jump bid at some stage, or by a cue-bid of an opponent's suit—your side should almost never settle for less than a game contract or a double that promises a satisfactory number of points. When such a game-guarantee situation applies to your side, a pass by either partner is a "forcing pass," obligating his mate to take action of some kind rather than let the bidding close with the opponents undoubled or his own side in less than a game contract.

As it was, North and South got a dinky 100 points for setting East two tricks not doubled, with two in spades, one in hearts and two in diamonds, whereas the worst should have been with that contract doubled, producing 300. "Don't pass a forcing pass" would be a good way to codify procedure in such cases.

South's 2-Spades obviously told the world that, with North able to answer the opening bid at all, the side had enough strength to call for a game contract. North did exactly the right thing by passing 3-Hearts. It was a forcing pass, to give South a choice between doubling and bidding, which South was ready to do with

Lilienthal Popular Choice Behind-the-Scenes Battle As Atom Control Chairman 'Twixt Braden, Messersmith

Special to Central Press
WASHINGTON—As the five men who will manage the nation's monopoly on atomic energy begin to take hold of their all-important jobs, it appears probable that at least for the present there will be no political opposition to their appointments.

Selection of David Lilienthal as chairman seemed to have been generally acceptable. While extreme leftwingers regard him as an internationalist, Lilienthal has taken a hard-headed view of the international aspects of nuclear energy as a weapon.

In speeches he has said flatly that agreements to "outlaw" atomic warfare are worthless. Likewise, he sees iron curtains in the world as preventing inspections of the various nations' peaceful applications of atomic energy from safeguarding against secret conversions to war purposes. The atomic chief declared that only an international body, with a full, airtight world monopoly on atomic energy, sources of material, and processing facilities, can save the world from future atomic war.

On domestic policies, Lilienthal is expected, even by those who have not approved the principles involved in the Tennessee Valley Authority, to do a good administrative job.

As chief of the TVA, Lilienthal has been on a tight rope, with the enemy of smart, able Senator Kenneth McKellar (D) of Tennessee, as an ever-present threat to trip him up if he took an awkward step. If anyone can manage the nation's atomic monopoly without getting in trouble with private industry and Congress, sure-footed Dave Lilienthal would seem most likely to succeed.

STATE DEPARTMENT OBSERVERS are watching a behind-the-scenes conflict between Assistant Secretary of State Spruille Braden, former "tough" United States ambassador to Argentina, and the present ambassador, George Messersmith.

Messersmith favors a minimum of compliance from the Peron regime in its commitments to string along with other American republics; Braden wants almost complete compliance.

An early determination of the struggle is expected and newsmen are waiting for it to break.

FIORIELLO H. LA GUARDIA, director of UNRRA, is the current subject of fun-poking among agriculture department employees in view of "Butch's" recent statement to a news conference that UNRRA is shipping mules to Yugoslavia for breeding purposes.

Better biologists than Butch immediately pointed up with delight the irreducible fact that mules are hybrids and cannot breed.

A Detroit newspaper editorial on the subject was circulated among employees to add to the merriment, particularly this "belly laugh" paragraph:

"It just goes to show that an UNRRA director can't make a jackass out of a couple of mules, but a couple of mules sure can make a jackass out of an UNRRA director."

La Guardia himself once said, "Whenever I pull a boner, it's always a beaut."

DESPITE HIS "THREE-STAR" AUTOMOBILE, Senator Elmer Thomas (D) of Oklahoma says he was stopped for an inspection of his credentials "at almost every turn" of the road when he drove 200 miles in Germany from Frankfurt to Nuernberg to attend the closing session of the top Nazis' trials.

Just back from a European tour, Thomas told a reporter that "members of my party had special cards of identification but American military authorities took no chances on permitting unauthorized persons to reach the trial."

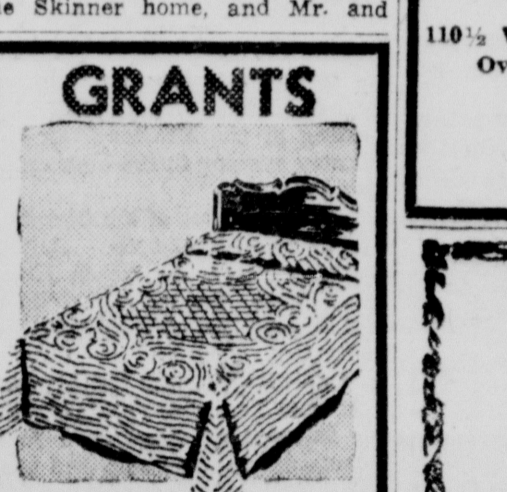

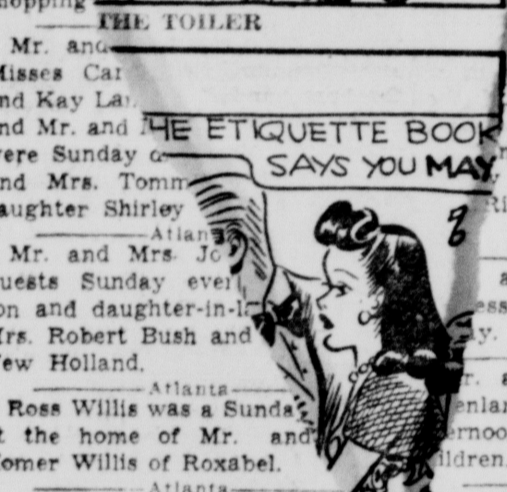

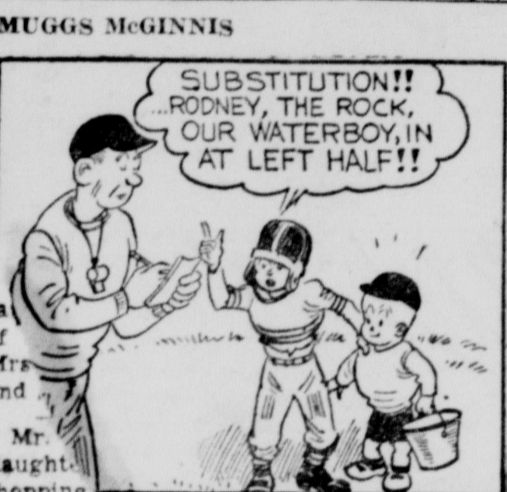

Thomas viewed the high Nazis before they were executed and said he saw Goering's cell. He said he was particularly impressed by the trim appearance of American military guards at the trial.

BUCKS LEAD IN OFFENSIVE PLAY

OSU Team Has Best Scoring Average, Leads in First Downs, Ground Gaining

By TOMMY DEVINE
United Press Sports Writer

CHICAGO, Nov. 13 — A decade ago Ohio State introduced the "wide open" style of offensive play to the Mid-West when it hired the late Francis A. Schmidt away from Texas Christian university and today the Bucks once again are high-point minded as they bid for another Big Nine football championship.

Schmidt was a coach whose system was all offense and no defense and his "razzle-dazzle" style keyed a new pattern of play in the Western Conference. The Bucks now are under the direction of youthful Paul Bixler and whether by intent or accident his current team has a distinct "Schmidt accent."

Ohio State leads the Big Nine in all important offensive departments according to the latest official statistics, but is lodged in seventh place on a defensive basis.

The Bucks top the circuit in scoring with an average of 24.7 points per game; in first downs with an average of 14.7 per contest; in net yards rushing with an average of 223 per game; in total yards gained with an average of 332 per game; and in total rushes with an average of 53 per contest.

Ohio State's great offensive punch has placed it in the thick of the Big Nine title running after a poor early season start. The Bucks play Illinois Saturday at Champaign in a game that may go far toward settling the championship.

Statistically, Illinois is an unimpressive sixth offensively and fourth defensively.

Northwestern rates second offensively with 308.2 yards per game, while Michigan is third with 284.6 yards.

Iowa is the top defensive team, granting its five opponents an average of but 116.8 yards a game on the ground and through the air. The Hawkeyes took over the leadership by virtue of holding Wisconsin to a meager 41 yards by rushing last Saturday.

Indiana leads in forward passing with an average gain of 130.8 yards per game through the air.

Bob Chappuis of Michigan continues to lead in individual total offense with an aggregate of 607 yards in five games.

The rushing leadership is held by Vic Schwall of Northwestern with 355 yards in 53 attempts, an average of 6.7 yards per carry.

The hottest individual race is between Bob DeMoss of Purdue and Ben Raimondi of Indiana for forward passing honors. Despite a shoulder and wrist injury, DeMoss is in first place with 40 completions in 84 attempts, while Raimondi has 39 completions in 74 tries. The Purdue star has gained 570 yards through the air and Raimondi's tosses have been good for 455 yards.

Lou Mihajlovich of Indiana tops the pass receivers with 14 catches that have been good for 169 yards. Schwall is the scoring pace-setter with 40 points and Johnny Galvin of Purdue leads the punters with an average of 42.8 yards per kick.

Up and Down Broadway

While it is possible to see some of the best-dressed women at an opera premiere, it is also possible to see some of the worst-dressed, due to lack of taste and not money.

Last night's demerits had to be split between a large woman wearing a wide-striped taffeta and one in a rich cream brocade with bouffant skirt which had pink ostrich trimmings draped around the bodice and at the hips, giving an impression of old feather boas' used too well and not wisely.

The most startling head adornment was that of the fleshy woman bulging against the seams of a tight dress who had 10 red rose buds stuck into her hair.

The prettiest woman on the premises, as usual, was Margaret Carson. She's the Met's press agent.

Big Nine Football Brings Heart

By United Press

COLUMBUS, O. — Offensive maneuvers were on the Ohio State schedule today in preparation for the all-important football game with Illinois Saturday.

Jerry Krall's knee injury resulted in promotion of two players. Coach Paul Bixler moved Russ Wolf, 160-pound sophomore, from fourth-string to third-team left halfback and shifted Tommy Phillips from third-string quarterback to left halfback.

EVANSTON, Ill.—Northwestern Coach Lynn Waldorf posed a tough question to his scouts today as he asked "where can we gain on Notre Dame?" And then outlined defensive plans for Johnny Lujack's passes.

BUCKS LEAD IN OFFENSIVE PLAY

OSU Team Has Best Scoring Average, Leads in First Downs, Ground Gaining

BY TOMMY DEVINE
United Press Sports Writer

CHICAGO, Nov. 13 — A decade ago Ohio State introduced the "wide open" style of offensive play to the Mid-West when it hired the late Francis A. Schmidt away from Texas Christian university and today the Bucks once again are high-point minded as they bid for another Big Nine football championship.

Schmidt was a coach whose system was all offense and no defense and his "razzle-dazzle" style key-noted a new pattern of play in the Western Conference. The Bucks now are under the direction of youthful Paul Bixler and whether by intent or accident his current team has a distinct "Schmidt accent."

Ohio State leads the Big Nine in all important offensive departments according to the latest official statistics, but is lodged in seventh place on a defensive basis. The Bucks top the circuit in scoring with an average of 24.7 points per game; in first downs with an average of 14.7 per contest; in net yards rushing with an average of 223 per game; in total yards gained with an average of 332 per game; and in total rushes with an average of 53 per contest.

Ohio State's great offensive punch has placed it in the thick of the Big Nine title running after a poor early season start. The Bucks play Illinois Saturday at Champaign in a game that may go far toward settling the championship.

Statistically, Illinois is an unimpressive sixth offensively and fourth defensively.

Northwestern rates second offensively with 308.2 yards per game, while Michigan is third with 284.6 yards.

Iowa is the top defensive team, granting its five opponents an average of but 116.8 yards a game on the ground and through the air. The Hawkeyes took over the leadership by virtue of holding Wisconsin to a meager 41 yards by rushing last Saturday.

Indiana leads in forward passing with an average gain of 130.8 yards per game through the air.

Bob Chappuis of Michigan continues to lead in individual total offense with an aggregate of 607 yards in five games.

The rushing leadership is held by Vic Schwall of Northwestern with 355 yards in 53 attempts, an average of 6.7 yards per carry.

The hottest individual race is between Ben DeMoss of Purdue and Ben Raimondi of Indiana for forward passing honors. Despite a shoulder and wrist injury, DeMoss is in first place with 40 completions in 84 attempts, while Raimondi has 39 completions in 74 tries. The Purdue star has gained 570 yards through the air and Raimondi's tosses have been good for 455 yards.

Lou Mihajlovich of Indiana tops the pass receivers with 14 catches that have been good for 169 yards. Schwall is the scoring pace-setter with 40 points and Johnny Galvin of Purdue leads the punters with an average of 42.8 yards per kick.

Up and Down Broadway

While it is possible to see some of the best-dressed women at an opera premiere, it is also possible to see some of the worst-dressed, due to lack of taste and not money. Last night's demerits had to be split between a large woman wearing a wide-striped taffeta and one in a rich cream brocade with bouffant skirt which had pink ostrich trimmings draped around the bodice and at the hips, giving an impression of old feather boas used too well and not wisely. The most startling head adornment was that of the fleshy woman bulging against the seams of a tight street dress who had 10 red rose buds stuck into her hair.

The prettiest woman on the premises, as usual, was Margaret Carson. She's the Met's press agent.

Keep your butter in the original carton which is especially designed and paraffined. The carton will prevent dehydration of the butter and will keep food odors from tainting it. It will also shut out the air and light which might spoil the butter's keeping quality. When you serve butter, take out only what you need for immediate use, then put the rest back into the carton. The second from the top shelf is the best place to keep butter in the refrigerator in its container, as it is neither too cold nor too damp.

If your house is filled with cooking odors from certain foods, fill a broad basin with boiling water. Drop into the water a few drops of oil of peppermint, oil of cloves or oil of lavender, and let the basin stand in the living room until the water is cold. The odors will be gone.

ANNUAL 'FLU', 'COLDS' WARNING BEING ISSUED

Public Asked To Take Steps
To Prevent Illness
During Winter

Annual season for colds and influenza is just ahead and Dr. A. D. Blackburn, Pickaway county health commissioner, Wednesday warned residents of the community to take proper steps to guard against those ailments.

Notification that a new wartime-produced vaccine aimed to give protection against influenza is now available to civilians was received Wednesday by Dr. Blackburn from Dr. Roger E. Heering, director of the Ohio Department of Health.

Dr. Heering, in the notification issued to county health authorities throughout the state, suggests that physicians use the vaccine in areas threatened by outbreaks of influenza.

Following is a copy of the communication from Dr. Heering:

"Despite the well-known fact that an influenza epidemic was widespread in Ohio late in 1945 and in early 1946, only 839 cases were reported to the division of communicable diseases of the Ohio Department of Health for the entire year of 1945, and to date in 1946 only 440 cases have been reported.

"Through October 5, 1946, the U. S. Public Health Service reports the staggering figure of 197,065 cases in the nation as compared with 77,025 for a like period in 1945, and a five-year median figure of 87,071.

"Although it is not possible to predict an epidemic of influenza for Ohio this year, the approach of the winter season with an increase in colds and other upper respiratory diseases and the possibility of another wave of influenza infections, should be constantly borne in mind. Research has shown that influenza is caused primarily by two types of viruses—influenza A and influenza B. In the fall of 1945, the Army carried on extensive vaccination of army personnel with influenza vaccine with apparently good results in prevention among selected groups of men. However, the vaccine provides protection for only a limited period of time and revaccination at frequent intervals seems necessary.

"The vaccine is now available for civilian use and inquiries have reached the Ohio Department of Health relative to its use on a widespread basis in a civilian population.

"The Ohio Department of Health feels that further research is in order to determine the practicability of using influenza vaccine in a civilian population and, in addition, cost of the product will preclude distribution by the Department for the time being.

"Present knowledge, however, suggests that the use of the vaccine by private physicians in areas threatened by serious outbreaks may be warranted."
